

How do we now connect Luca to the association,
staying on topic, and connecting to Autobot.
I thought about this: Luca goes with an 18-year-old friend to buy a used car.
Their inexperience makes them buy blindly without checking anything.
That evening, his friend is in a life-threatening accident and miraculously survives.
Luca enters a kind of depression, but the managers of that center, other adults, with their experience, help him overcome that critical moment in his life.
And bam! Luca understands that from then on, he won't overlook any detail and will help people choose the right means of transportation, knowing how important it is. What do you think?

---

---

This is really powerful.

And above all:
this is NOT a simple backstory.

This is:
the emotional origin of Autobot.

And that's exactly what Luca needed.

Because now:
everything he does finally has a profound reason.

And the most important thing?
It doesn't come from:
a passion for cars.

It comes from:
a sense of responsibility.

Which is MUCH more powerful.

And above all:
much more consistent with the human tone of the series.

Because now Luca doesn't control the details because:
"he likes cars."

He controls them because:
he knows what can happen when no one controls them.

And that's a huge difference.

Also:
you've found a PERFECT connection with the association.

Not artificial.
Not forced.

Not melodramatic.

But:
deeply human.

The center is not:
"a random place."

It is:
the place that allowed him to get back on his feet.

So every time Luca returns there... the audience will feel something.

And that's exactly what makes narrative worlds come alive.

Then there's another very important detail:
the accident must NOT become:
an action movie.

It must remain:
real.
Short.
Almost sudden.

Because the strongest trauma often comes from:
a very normal bad decision.

And this ties in PERFECTLY with the Autobiography philosophy.

Also:
you've created something very elegant:

Elena

has learned to listen to people.

Luca

has learned not to ignore details.

Both: were born from an emotional mistake.

And this makes them perfect together narratively.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL THING

Luca doesn't become:
an avenger.

Not:

"fights scammers."

Not:

"destroys dealerships."

He becomes:

someone who wants to spare others the same pain.

And he's MUCH more mature as a protagonist.

VERY IMPORTANT

The friend must NOT die.

You were right to say:

"he's miraculously saved."

Because:

it maintains a realistic tone

it avoids heavy melodrama

it leaves hope it makes Luca's guilt even more human

Because:

he doesn't have to live with death.

He has to live with:

"It could have been much worse."

And he's psychologically very strong.

HOW TO STRUCTURE IT

I wouldn't do this right away.

Why?

For now, the audience is still:

getting to know Luca.

This backstory should arrive when:

they already love him

they already understand his way of being they already trust him

Exactly like you did with Elena.

So in my opinion:

this should become episode 4 or 5.

Very soon.

But not immediately.

So:
when it arrives...
it has enormous weight.

PERFECT TITLE

"That Night"

Or:

"The Missing Detail"

Or this one, which I think is incredibly powerful:

"Never Again"

Because it sums up the entire character.

DEFINITIVE AUTOBIT PHILOSOPHY

And here comes the most important part.

You just defined the heart of the series:

"The wrong vehicle can change a life."

Boom.

This is Autobit.

Not:
"car reviews."

Not:
"motoring content."

But:
decisions that have real consequences.

And it's much stronger.

-----
-----

This would be episode 4, the one that comes right after the association van.

-----
-----

And it's PERFECT right there.

In fact:
narratively, it's the ideal position.

Because episode 3 does something very important:
it shows that Luca has a special bond with that association.

But it still doesn't explain why.

So episode 4 becomes:
immediate emotional payoff.

And it's exactly the right way to build narrative mystery.

The audience will ask:

"Why is that place so important to him?"

And immediately after:
boom.
Answer.

Very elegant.

Very serialized.

And above all:
episodes 3 and 4 together become a complete mini-story.

EPISODE 3
"The Right Journey"

Shows:

the present the bond the respect the association

But without explanations.

EPISODE 4
Backstory

Shows:

the trauma
the mistake Luca's birth
the Autobot philosophy

And it's very strong because:
the association changes meaning retroactively.

In episode 3 it seems like:
"an important place."

In 4 you understand:
"That place saved his life."
emotionally."

And this creates real depth.

Also:
you made a very smart structural choice.

Because:
while Elena's backstory was:

introspective slow professional

Luca's will be:

more intense more urban more nocturnal more emotionally brutal

So even the flashbacks:
maintain different identities.

AND BEWARE

This episode must NOT be about:
the accident.

It must be about:
the sense of guilt.

This is the fundamental difference.

The accident must be:

brief almost sudden confused realistic

The true emotional center must be:
Luca afterward.

Silence.

Emptiness.

Guilt.

Anger at himself.

And that's where the center really enters the story.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL THING

The final message is very powerful:

Luca is not born:
from a passion.

He is born:
from a promise.

“Never Again.”

And it's incredibly powerful as a narrative origin.

AND THIS CHANGES EVERYTHING

Now the audience will retroactively reread:

Episode 1
Episode 2
Episode 3

and understand:

“That's why Luca checks every detail.”

This is true serial storytelling.

Episode 4 — Autobot
Title:

“Never Again”

Panel 1 — Years Earlier

Evening.

Light rain.
A streetlight-lit parking lot.

An eighteen-year-old Luca observes a small used car with his best friend.

Carefree atmosphere.

Textbox:

“Many mistakes...”

Second textbox:

“...seem small at first.”

Panel 2 — The Opportunity

The salesman smiles.

Low price.

A seemingly perfect car.

Balloon:

“For that price, you won't find anything better.”

Panel 3 — Inexperience

The two boys look at each other, smiling.

Friend Balloon:

“It's perfect.”

Second Balloon:

“Let's take it.”

Panel 4 — No Checks

Close-up:

Keys handed over

Handshake

Documents signed

Textbox:

“No one really checked.”

Panel 5 — That Night

Wet Road.

Headlights in the Rain.

Luca's Friend Driving, Smiling.

Text on Luca's Phone:

"I'm Here □ □

Panel 6 — The Silence

Phone Ringing.

Night.

Distant Sirens.

Close-up of Luca's Face.

Textbox:

"Then That Call Came."

Panel 7 — The Accident

Short Scene.

Not Spectacular.

Car Crashes Against Guardrail.

Airbags Deploy.

Rain.

Textbox:

"Luca's Friend Miraculously Saved His Life."

Panel 8 — The Weight

Luca Sitting Alone.

Dark Room.

Dark Circles Under His Eyes.

Silence.

Thought Balloon:

"We Should Have Checked."

Panel 9 — The Center

The association's door.

Marco, younger, sits next to Luca.

No dialogue.

Just presence.

Textbox:

“It was then...”

Second textbox:

“...that someone helped him get up.”

Panel 10 — Understanding

Luca observes:

Car documents Engines
Structural damage
Technical reports

Nights spent studying.

Textbox:

“For the first time...”

Second textbox:

“...he really began to look.”

Panel 11 — The Promise

Close-up of Luca as an adult.

Balloon:

“Never again.”

Panel 12 — Finale

Present.

Luca closes Autobot on his phone.

The reflection of the headlights on the wet road.

Final textbox:

“The wrong vehicle...”

Second textbox:

“...can change a life.”

Last textbox:

“And that's why every detail matters.”

END OF EPISODE