

Let's move on to the seventh episode.

Perfect.

So, from the seventh episode, we begin the important transition:

Immobit is no longer just a "tool."

It becomes:

investigative memory.

This episode should make one thing clear:

Elena remembers thanks to Immobit.

It's not just observation.

It's archive.

History.

Comparison.

Pattern.

And this is where the app truly begins to take center stage, without becoming advertising.

EPISODE 7

Title

"The Disappeared Ad"

Ambience

Rain.

Evening.

Almost empty city.

Tone:

Mysterious.

More of an investigative thriller.

Opening

An elegant man enters Elena's office.

Nervous.

He says:

"A week ago, I found the perfect place."

"Now it no longer exists."

Elena

"What do you mean, 'it no longer exists'?"

Man

Shows his phone.

The listing has disappeared.

No trace online.

Important detail

The man:

He doesn't remember the agency

He doesn't remember the exact price

He doesn't remember the floor

He doesn't remember the exact street

He only remembers:

"The kitchen had a huge window."

Elena opens Immobit

And HERE the role of the app changes.

She doesn't search online.

She searches her personal archive.

Very important sequence

Immobit screenshots:

Visit history

Saved listings

Old photos

Scores

Notes

Maps

Comparisons

Key phrase

Elena:

"The Internet forgets."

"Immobit doesn't."

BOOM.

This is a key phrase in the series.

Investigation

Elena finds something.

An old visit made:

8 months earlier.

Same apartment.

Same windows.

But:

different price

different agency

other photos

Twist

The house keeps coming back online.

With:

different listings

altered photos

different prices

To hide a problem.

Real problem

The building has:

serious structural leaks.

Every time:

online listing

disappears

changes agency

returns

Powerful scene

Elena compares:

4 different listings

for the same house.

Here Immobit becomes:

detective board.

Man

Silent.

Then:

"So someone keeps trying..."

Elena

"Until someone looks hard enough."

Ending

Rain outside.

Monitor on.

Immobit folder:

"DUPLICATE LISTINGS"

New file saved.

Final sentence

"Houses disappear.

Problems remain."

END.

Why this episode is VERY IMPORTANT

For the first time:

the plot EXISTS thanks to Immobit.

It's no longer a support.

It's:

a narrative engine.

And it also introduces:

historical archive

real estate memory

duplicate listings

patterns

soft fraud

digital investigation

And it makes Elena grow enormously.

Now she's not just attentive.

She's prepared.